

iCohere 11 Delivers World's First Unified Learning Platform

Customizable professional development platform creates an exceptional client experience, reduces client costs by providing several modes of learning in one powerful solution

WALNUT CREEK, Calif. and Washington, D.C. – AUG 13, 2014 - iCohere, a global provider of cloud-based learning management and professional development solutions, today released iCohere 11, a new generation platform for unified learning. The fully integrated platform, with many new unique features, provides a collaborative, all-in-one approach to eLearning, virtual conferences, and member communities, at the average cost of just one of those solutions.

In the highly competitive $56 billion eLearning market, the release of the iCohere 11 unified learning management system, brings together multiple modes of learning into a single, consistent user experience. iCohere 11 presents a distinctive and innovative approach to eLearning and eliminates the expense of licensing multiple platforms, while also reducing training and IT management costs for client companies.

For 13 years, iCohere's clients from associations, nonprofits, government, healthcare, and education have benefitted from a unified approach to learning and professional development.

"Our costs are down, our registrations are up, and our attendee satisfaction ratings are record-breaking," said Jack Coursen, associate director of professional development at the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association (ASHA).

"iCohere is at the front edge of innovation. It's why Save the Children is the third organization I've introduced to the iCohere platform," said Kathy Spangler, vice president U.S. Programs. "We partner with 30 locations around the globe in 120 countries. We have a very strategic mission and iCohere allows us to communicate and collaborate."
