CANDACE VINCENT BRINGS 10 YEARS EXPERIENCE DESIGNING SUCCESSFUL ONLINE LEARNING FOR ASSOCIATIONS TO iCOHERE CLIENTS

WALNUT CREEK, CA. and WASHINGTON, D.C. – DEC 1, 2016 – Candace Vincent, former director of education at the Cleveland Bar Association and manager of online learning for the National Association of College Stores (NACS), has joined the iCohere client solutions team. She brings over 10 years of experience developing successful online learning programs for top associations. While working with NACS, she designed over a dozen successful e-courses and three online conferences using the iCohere platform.

“We are tremendously fortunate to have Candace join our team,” said Lance Simon, CVEP, executive vice president for iCohere. “Not only does she bring extensive experience designing online learning programs for associations, she has over a decade of experience designing them using the iCohere platform. She is an ideal person to help associations learn how to leverage the versatility and features of the iCohere platform.”

Vincent is enthusiastic about sharing with fellow colleagues and associations how to use the iCohere platform to successfully launch and improve online learning programs.

“I’ve experienced firsthand how iCohere can improve the delivery of education and professional development - the platform is the solution for so many of today’s opportunities to share, learn, and collaborate,” said Vincent. “I feel truly fortunate to join the iCohere team, and I am looking forward to helping others achieve the success possible through the platform.”

As the director of education at the Cleveland Bar Association, Vincent recognized the importance and profitability of repurposing content. She worked to gain accreditation for recorded conferences and institutes in which participants enrolled to improve their professional competence. As a result of these efforts, the bar association extended the life of its continuing education content, enabling more lawyers to experience and learn from high-quality programming in a variety of practice areas.
